

Meet Our Fellows!

Annie, UC Berkeley

Hi! My name is Annie Miller (she/her) and I am a second year at UC Berkeley. I am currently studying environmental sciences and data sciences. I became passionate about environmental justice and sustainability in high school after learning about our current climate crisis. I've had the opportunity to expand my understanding of environmental issues and their social implications, and I have become especially interested in food systems and food justice. I am so excited to be a part of the Atlas Fellowship and look forward to learning more about Zero Waste and how to move towards a completely Zero Waste campus. In my free time I love listening to music, reading mystery novels and taking long walks.

Hannah, UC Berkeley

Hi everyone, my name is Hannah Qiang (she/her) and I'm a fourth year at UC Berkeley. I'm majoring in Environmental Sciences, minoring in Conservation and Resource Studies and Cal Teach (K-12 STEM Education). I am passionate about educational equity, environmental and social justice and enjoy discussing such topics with my friends. In my free time I like to record my podcast, make videos, go on picnics and paint.

Kahi, Willamette University

Hi, my name is Kahi, and I'm a senior at Willamette University. I am currently the Lead Coordinator for Students for Sustainability, and I am working with our team to make our campus a more environmentally friendly place. We hold educational events and try to provide access to sustainable products like reusable mugs and menstrual cups. I grew up in Hawaii, so I've always been surrounded by a culture that cares about our environment, and I want to help encourage that mindset in my communities. Outside of sustainability related things, I am a Japanese Studies major who enjoys illustration and playing bass with my band!
